GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same water source and must never have been severed from the water supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

An appropriative right is required for use of water which is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. A water right is a privilege not needed by riparian water users. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users.

The above discussion is provided for general information. For more specific information concerning water rights, please contact an attorney or write to this office. We have several pamphlets available. They include:

- "Statement of Water Division and Use"
- "Information Pertaining to Water Rights in California"
- "Water Rights for Stockpond Construction Prior to 1969"
- "Appropriation of Water in California"

From their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators. Statement of Water Division and Use must be filed by a riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users. The filing of a statement from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

Statements of Water Division and Use must be filed by riparian and pre 1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Code section 5100 only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriative rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land must be in the same water shed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of ground water.

An appropriative right is required for use of water which is surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. An appropriative right is exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.
